FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS ABOUT HUNTINGTON'S DISEASE

What is Huntington's Disease (HD)?
Huntington's disease (HD) is a devastating, hereditary, degenerative brain disorder that diminishes the affected individual's ability to walk, think, talk and reason. Eventually, the person with HD becomes totally dependent upon others for his or her care, which in turn profoundly disrupts the lives of the entire family emotionally, socially and economically.

Who discovered Huntington's disease?
Named for Dr. George Huntington who first described this hereditary disorder in 1872, HD is currently recognized as one of the more common genetic disorders in the United States.

Who is at-risk for developing the disease?
More than 30,000 Americans are actively afflicted with HD and more than 250,000 are "at risk" of inheriting the disease from an affected parent. HD strikes as many people in the world as hemophilia, cystic fibrosis or muscular dystrophy.

What are the signs and symptoms of HD?
HD symptoms fall into three categories: motor problems, personality changes and cognitive difficulties. Motor problems can include deterioration of coordination, walking and balance, slurred speech, difficulty swallowing and the presence of involuntary movements such as twitching, spasms, and the appearance of being intoxicated. Personality changes may include irritability, temper tantrums, depression, paranoia, and violent outbursts. Cognitive difficulties evolve later in the diseases when HD hinders memory, mental flexibility, fluency of thought and communication. Eventually, complications such as choking, infection or heart failure result in fatality.

What is the treatment or cure for Huntington's disease?
At present, there is an FDA-approved treatment for chorea, but no disease-modifying treatment or cure.

What is the mission of the Huntington's Disease Society of America (HDSA)?
The Society is a national, voluntary health organization dedicated to improving the lives of people with Huntington's disease and their families.

HDSA programs and services include initiatives to:
- To promote and support research and medical efforts to eradicate Huntington's disease.
- To assist people and families affected by Huntington's disease to cope with the problems presented by the disease.
- To educate the public and health professionals about Huntington's disease.
